DOD CHANGES IDENTIFICATION CARDS

The Department of Defense (DOD) began the process of removing Social Security numbers from issued identification (ID) cards in an effort to prevent identity theft. The exception to this applies to Geneva Convention cardholders whose last four numbers of their Social Security number will remain on their cards. All ID card holders should wait until their cards are in need of renewal before replacing their cards with ones devoid of a Social Security number. The DoD instructed retirees with indefinite expiration dates on their cards to start replacing them in January 2010. Cardholders whose cards have expired may contact the nearest Real-time Automated Personnel Identification System site. If the cardholder does not know where their local RAPIDS site is located, they can visit the Rapids Site Locator to find a location nearby.

HEALTH RECORD PLAN MAY OPEN VA TO ALL VETERANS

President Obama's ambitious plan to establish a lifetime electronic record for service members and veterans will improve delivery of benefits, speed processing of claims and, over time, open VA health care to any veteran, regardless of their medical condition or income level. VA Secretary Eric Shinseki first raised the idea of a more sophisticated electronic record system, and linked it to automatic enrollment by all veterans in the VA health system, during a House hearing in February.

This week, through a press spokeswoman, Shinseki confirmed that universal access to VA health care is integral to the administration's plan to develop as quickly as possible a 21st Century electronic record system. "Secretary Shinseki and the whole [VA] team believe that 'uniform registration' in the VA health system 'is an essential part of the lifetime virtual record,'" said Katie Roberts, his press secretary, in an e-mail. Shinseki and Defense Secretary Robert Gates were with the president April 9 in the Old Executive Office Building when Obama announced to an audience of veterans a "huge step toward modernizing the way VA health care is delivered and [VA] benefits are administered."

Obama described a comprehensive electronic record system, to be developed and used jointly by the Department of Defense and VA, which would hold all service-related documents, administrative and medical, on individuals from the time they enter service until "they are laid to rest." Members leaving service no longer would have to "hand carry" medical records to VA health facilities.

And VA health providers, like military counterparts, would have full electronic medical files on any member or veteran. VA claim processes likewise would have access to military administrative files, thereby reducing delays and mistakes for applicants. "And it would do all this," the president said, "with the strictest and most rigorous standards of privacy and security so our veterans can have confidence that their medical records can only be shared at their direction."

Shinseki, a retired four-star general and former Army chief of staff, told the House Veterans Affairs Committee Feb. 4 that he already was discussing with Gates a joint electronic record system. "An individual enters the ranks as a youngster and stays for several years, or stays for 20, and comes to us as a veteran. Those records ought to be transferable...accurate and complete.

Not just medical records but personal records as well, because the personnel records are also part of the disability adjudication process. If we can get to this agreement on what an electronic medical record looks like, we will solve the challenges we're wrestling with today where we have two different records," Shinseki said. With regard to medical records, Shinseki said features of the VA Vista system were preferred, even by military doctors, to the more cumbersome AHLTA system used by the Defense Department. At the same hearing, Shinseki said mandatory enrollment in the VA health care system should be part of any move to a joint electronic record. "That alone will force the two institutions to begin to move together on what records need to be handed off," said Shinseki. Mandatory enrollment is significant because current access to VA health care is restricted. Since January 2003, veterans in Priority Group 8 – those who have no service-connected conditions and have incomes above certain government thresholds – have been barred from enrolling in the VA health care system.

About a half million Group 8s since then have applied. Congress has taken a first step to lift that ban. By July, income thresholds on new Group 8 enrollments will be raised enough to allow in about 266,000 more veterans. The Obama administration announced plans to more than double that number by 2013. But if launch of the "Virtual Lifetime Electronic Record", as VA officials have dubbed it, would occur sooner, so too would the VA medical system to all veterans.

That's important, Shinseki told lawmakers. "Even for those who may not have a disability claim" on separation, he said, "10 years down the road, who knows? Twenty years down the road we don't want to be doing what we're doing now, which is chasing details and records that are hidden away some place." Shinseki assured Congress that he won't allow the health system to become so crowded that access to care is choked off for the war disabled or veterans having service-connected disabilities.

Chuck Hume, deputy chief information officer in the Veterans Health Administration, said it's too soon to predict when VA and DOD will be ready to launch a single electronic record system. "The president has stated that he wants us to pursue this as aggressively as possible and to get this vision realized for the benefit of our service member and veterans," said Hume. "But it's premature – without [a system] architecture, without a detailed plan – to forecast a timeline." Linda Fischetti, VHA's top health informatics officer, said the vision embraced here presents wonderful opportunities for veterans.

Electronic health records evolved, she said, to ease workloads within medical offices, then inside medical departments, across hospitals and then entire systems. What's endorsed here, she said, is a system with a different purpose. "It's not about the department. It's not about the hospital. It's about the person," said Fischetti. "What do we need to move all of this information to support the best decisions and services for the person? How do we make this information available so they can partner in their health care?"

NAVY INVESTIGATES 1980'S CAMP LEJEUNE WATER HAZARD

Did you live or work at Camp Lejeune in 1987 or before? Is so, please register online at the below sites.

In the early 1980's, two solvents, both unregulated at the time were found in two water systems serving the Tarawa Terrace and Hadnot Point areas: TCE and PCE. Certain drinking water wells were identified as the source and were taken out of service. The Agency for Toxic Substance and Disease Registry is determining whether an association exists between exposure to the water and certain adverse health effects. The National Academy of Sciences is evaluating specific health risks associated with exposure.

Upon completion of the research, the Marine Corps will notify those on the registry through direct mail and e-mail. Hhp://www.marines.mil/clsurvey and <http://www.atsdr.cdc.gov/> sessions (one AM and one PM) as we have done in the past. It was decided that we would continue to have the two sessions.

2. Fundraisers: Brat sales are scheduled for 11 AM to 6 PM on 24 through 26 July 2009 at the Cub grocery store in Rogers, MN and 11 AM to 6 PM on 4 through 7 September 2009 (Labor Day weekend) at the Cub store in Elk River, MN. It would be appreciated if there were more volunteers to assist the sales.
3. National convention: The deadline to have the delegate forms to national is 30 July. The chapter is authorized six votes and President Donais would like to see many present members at the convention.
 - The Rapid City, SD chapter can be contacted for information.

Good of the Order:

Rod thanked the Chapter for the flowers sent to Rod's father's funeral.

Motion by Mark Davidson, seconded by Dennis Rock to adjourn the meeting. Motion carried. President Donais adjourned the meeting at 1230 hours.

The next Chapter meeting is scheduled for after the close of the AFRAD at Camp Ripley, MN on 29 August 2009. As always, spouses and guests are invited to attend.

New Business:

LAWMAKERS SEEK HEALTHIER DOD MEDICAL BUDGET

Key lawmakers said Friday that they are pleased with the Obama administration's decision to at least temporarily drop the idea that big increases in Tricare fees are an essential part of the future of military health care.

Rep. Susan Davis, D-Calif., chairwoman of the House Armed Services personnel panel, and Rep. Joe Wilson of South Carolina, the panel's ranking Republican, said they expect a healthier debate on the future of military health care when, for the first time in three years, that debate will not begin in a deep rut.

Allen Middleton, the Pentagon's top health official, said the $47.4 billion health care budget for 2010 not only omits any call for higher co-payments, deductibles and fees for Tricare beneficiaries, but also does not include unspecified across-the-board cuts in service medical budgets, something used several times by the Bush administration, which called the cuts "efficiency wedges."

In the past few years, with the Defense Department medical budget arriving on Capitol Hill with built-in assumptions of cost-savings from the proposed Tricare fee increases and the efficiency wedges, lawmakers who were not keen on those ideas had to scramble to find extra money to cover their unfunded costs.

Davis, who along with Wilson fiercely oppose Tricare fee increases, said it is not entirely clear if the 2010 budget really includes full medical funding. Davis said, "We have only had the budget justification materials for about 36 hours and are still awaiting answers from the department on various issues."

First the National TREA convention is in Rapid city South Dakota this year. The dates are from 23 September to the 26th of September. The chapter will pay for your registration if you wish to attend. We need to know if you plan to attend by the end of June so we can make out a check for everyone's registration. We also have to send in our delegate listing to National.

Next our chapter is again sponsoring the AFRAD at Camp Ripley, Saturday the 29th of August. We need helpers at this event to help make it another great one for our chapter. Workers will receive complementary food & registration. There will be a morning and afternoon sessions again this year. We need volunteers help with the registration tables, break area, TREA information table, just to name a few. A block of rooms in billeting has been
